FIRE PREVENTION CRUSADE THROUGHOUT THE STATE

Dense Fog Responsible For Auto Accident

Blinded by the heavy fog and the darkness of early morning Dr. W. P Gemmil, driving his Chevrolet Sedan went over a steep embankment on the Belle Vernon-Fayette City road near his home this morning, partially wrecking the machine and injuring two of his passengers, his brother, Dr. J. R. Gemmill and wife

Dr. Gemmill had left home shortly after five o'clock with his brother and his wife and two children, who had been visiting with him for a few days. They intended to take an early train at Lock Four to return to their home at Millvale The dense fog made driving almost an impossibility and the car was barely creeping along when suddenly it left the road and plunged over the embankment and landed on its side.

The occupants of the car were all thrown from their seats and Dr. J. R. Gemmill and his wife struck the top of the machine, the doctor suffering a bad laceration on his head while his wife was cut above the eye. The two children were only slightly bruised, while the driver escaped without any injury. All were taken to the home of Dr. Gemmill, only a short distance away and given medical attention. The car was not badly damaged and was removed to a garage for repairs.

Arrange Good Bout

The local Order of Moose will again open their semi-monthly boxing season on Saturday evening, October 10th. Members may bring their friends to what promises to be the most auspicious opening yet made by this enterprising organization, which, through its cheif steward, Digger Stanley, is ever ready to entertain all kinds of healthy exercises and athletics. A large crowd is sure to be on hand to see their many favorites compete in several boxing bouts together with many other amusements.

Local and other talent are included in the opening program which is entirely free. A cordial invitation is extended to all visitors, accompanied by a member and in keeping with their previous efforts the Moose intends that all patrons thoroughly enjoy themselves. The complete program will appear in the next issue of this paper. As the best local athletes and several out of town boxers will exhibit their wares, the night's program will start at 7 p. m The first boxing bout will be at 8 o'clock sharp, owing to the limited space members and their friends will be on time to save confusion and obtain the best seats.

However, everybody will be well taken care of. This is the assurance of the Moose committee and this is the fore runner to many similar social evenings to be enjoyed by members and their friends during the winter months.

Athlete on Trial

Dan Dougherty, of West View, basket ball referee, former W. & J. football star and well known in amateur sport circles, was placed on trial in Criminal Court yesterday in Allegheny county, on a charge of shooting Mike Fricano, a barber and his father, Salvatore Fricano, February 6. Mike Fricano, the first witness, testified Dougherty entered his shop in West View when being closed for the night and began shooting one bullet striking the barber in the chest and one in the head. When the father ran in from a back room Dougherty grappled with him and shot him in the mouth, it was testified. Dougherty is charged with felonious assault and battery.

At the time of the shooting Dougherty said he was attacked by the two Fricanos, after resenting an insult, which he said, had been offered his wife, by the barber Fricano denied insulting Mrs. Dougherty.

Special Demonstration

What might be considered a most exceptional demonstration is now going on at the General Racket store, 431 Schoonmaker avenue, displaying the Domestic Science Fireless cooker. This demonstration is especially inviting to the women but is no less interesting to the men. In this day of high priced fuel and scarcity of domestic help it is a wonderful lift to the housekeeper. An invitation is extended to the women of the community to call and make an inspection.

Council Meeting

Council met in regular monthly session last evening with all members present with the exception of John Check. For three hours they considered various problems of interest to the taxpayers with the finances of the borough taking the larger part of the time.

Two petitions were received for lights, one in the alley between First and Oneida and Schoonmaker and McKee and the other at Highland and Fourteenth street.

Council also went on record in favor of participating in the Columbus Day celebration and will lend its moral support to the occasion. Permission was also granted the Fire Department to use the truck in the parade and the machine will be gayly decorated and accompanied by the department, which will attend in a body.

The Burgess' report for the month of September showed a total of $315 in fines collected. A committee of three was appointed to close all deals for property condemned for the incinerating plant at the best possible prices. Council then adjourned to meet again Wednesday of next week.

Found Guilty

J. C. Hoover of Cleveland, charged with transporting in interstate travel an automobile, said to have been stolen in New York, was held under $1,000 bail for the November term of Federal Court after a hearing yesterday before the United States Commissioner at Pittsburgh. Harry Krain and Harry Bright, of Cleveland, who were named in the same complaint, were released on their own recognizances to appear at the trial.

The three men were arrested by the police several days ago in Pittsburgh. Hoover claims to have purchased the automobile from a man in Cleveland but was unable to give positive identification of the person who sold it. Krain and Bright said they were passengers on the trip from Cleveland.

Revoke Ruling

(By United Press)

Harrisburg, Oct. 7.---The Public Service Commission revoked the order of last August granting open top coal cars to tipple miners and instructed the Pennsylvania railroad to accept as a substitute order the ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission governing distribution of open top cars at the mines. The ruling is considered as a victory here for the independent operators who filed the complaint against the discriminatory effect of the Public Service ruling.

New York, Oct. 7---Brooklyn's Robins were back on the ground today after a two day "up in a tree" where they had been sent flapping by the Cleveland Indians

Yesterday's victory not only brought the broad backs of Uncle Wilbert Robinson away from the well known wall but it filled the flatbush fans of bunches that 1916 is not to repeat itself.

While no battery selections were announced or even intimated for today the prospects were for a southpaw pitching duel between Sherrod Smith, Cleveland's star portsider and Rube Marquard, Brooklyn's veteran lefthander.

Fatal Explosion on Steamship

Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct 7.---An explosion on the Steamship Crow, this afternoon in the Brooklyn docks caused the death of many persons and the serious injury of many others. All the police ambulances in Brooklyn were rushed to the scene and were working hard in their efforts to rescue the injured. Firemen with gas masks had penetrated the lower hold of the ship and recovered twelve dead and stated the hold was strewn with dead and injured.

School Children Instructed In Fire Prevention

Harrisburg, Oct. 1.---Gov. William Sproul has issued a statement urging all citizens of Pennsylvania to observe Fire Prevention Day next Saturday, October 9. He said the day had been set aside to impress upon the people the tremendous loss of human life and destruction of property by fire in this state every year. He requested Pennsylvanians to arrange for educational and instructive exercises, so that the people would realize the serious effects of the unwarranted fire waste in this Commonwealth.

Governor Sproul pointed to the figures compiled in the Bureau of Fire Protection showing that seventy-five per cent of the fires were preventable. He declared it was the duty of every resident to join in the nation wide movement to reduce and eliminate eventually the enormous loss by fires.

To further the prevention movement, Governor Sproul urged all citizens to remove fire hazards from their property; to destroy trash, rubbish and other accumulations of combustible material, and to inspect and repair lighting and heating appliances that are fire menaces. He advocated that factories, and public buildings, school houses and institutions be inspected for fire risks, and that municipal fire departments give attention to the condition of hydrants, water pressure and fire fighting appliances.

In his statement, Governor Sproul called attention to the present shortage of dwellings and business structures throughout the state, saying it would be deplorable to have a property loss now as great as last year, when $20 000,000 worth of property was burned.

Epidemic Spreading

Health authorities yesterday reported an even hundred cases of typhoid fever at Bentleyville and a call has been issued for extra nurses to take care of the patients. Four Red Cross nurses have been sent to the little village and are assisting the local health authorities in combating the spread of the dread disease.

State Health authorities have taken the situation in hand and are doing all in their power to abate the epidemic. It has been discovered that twenty-six families have been using water from the wells that are contaminated and all are kept under surveilance.

Citizenship Meeting

All Monessen women who expect to cast their first ballot in November are interested to hear a good speaker, who can give them a clear insight into the duties of citizenship. A cordial invitaton is extended to them to attend a meeting in the United Brethren church, Reed avenue, on Friday evening of this week at seven-thirty o'clock. The speaker is a member of the county executive committee. You will be privileged to ask her questions. The late Dr. Anna Howard Shaw was for many years a state and national lecturer for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, before she became president of the National Woman's Suffrage Association. The officers of the local union will have charge of the meeting on Friday evening.

Must Pay Fine

Carl H Carlson and John E. Boylan, brakemen on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, yesterday were fined $50 each by Judge Charles P. Orr, in United States district court, when they entered pleas of guilty to a charge of transporting liquor from a North Side saloon to the railroad station, where it was placed in a private locker. The complaint against the men was filed by Prohibition Agent C. C. Gregg on information furnished by Charles F. Horgan, superintendent of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad police.

Pietro Vitale of Monessen was fined $500 when he pleaded guilty to a charge of operating an illicit still.

Sudden Death

John Kollar, aged 22 years, died last night very suddenly in the Presbyterian hospital, Pittsburgh. He was a brother-in-law of Walter A. Cook, agent of the Peoples Natural Gas. Ward was removed here after the day that he got out was in a critical condition and Mr. Cook started at once for the hospital but was told here too late, death having already resulted

Merchant Arrested

Hyman Applebaum, a well known grocer of Donora was arrested last evening on a charge of selling intoxicating liquor. For some time Donora has been over run with drunks and the police have been conducting a careful search in an effort to locate the oasis. Suspicion was turned toward Applebaum following the arrest of Steve Risosky, who beat his small child while under the influence of liquor. He confessed that he had been supplied regularly with liquor at the Applebaum store and Constable Titus at once placed the grocer under arrest. It was found that he had been disposing of whiskey at $6.00 a quart and had openly sold other intoxicants, even running a book account on the sales. He will be held for court.

At the November term of court last year the prisoner was hailed before the court charged with selling a bitter wine containing 47 per cent alcohol. He was found guilty and paid a fine of $500 and costs.

Decorators Active

Decorators arrived in town this morning and are busily engaged decorating the town in preparation for the Columbus Day celebration here Tuesday of next week. Streamers are being placed across the main streets of the town and the decorators will then start on the buildings and it is hoped that by Sunday the town will be in galla attire for the big event.

Auto Runs Wild

A rather peculiar accident occurred about 4:30 yesterday afternoon, when an auto, the property of Jacob Lear, which was left standing on McKee avenue, started down the hill and went over into the Sixth street park and landed against the band stand. The machine, a Maxwell, was badly damaged in its wild flight.

MISS SOPHRONIA

By SUSAN F. HAYFORD.

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Miss Sophronia Higgin was forty one and looked it, and knew that she looked it; but, as this eventful May-day afternoon she sat in the little front room and looked down the years of her youth she knew that of all days this was the happiest.

For the first time the thrill of real adventure was hers. She was to spend the summer at Seaside hotel, and, moreover, as the owner of it.

A week before she had expected to go on with the same life as the last forty years had held till the eventful day that brought her the letter from a lawyer in the city telling that she was the owner of Seaside by the will of her late uncle, Jared Stone.

Seaside was to go on the same as before. She had that very day completed the arrangements with Mr. Westley as proprietor, and he was to attend to everything. Her presence there as owner was not to be known to anyone at the hotel save to that auspicious person himself.

June came and went with little excitement at the Seaside except to Miss Higgin. The season had been cold and the guests few, but there were rare days when she and the young man of the orange tie, Mr. Harding Graves, boated, and evenings when the moon was bright across the water.

It was the first of July that Miss Sophronia looked in her glass and marveled at the unaccountableness of love. "And he says my eyes are beautiful," she reflected, as she worked at the tell-tale crow's feet with the new vanishing cream that Mrs. Winters, who passed for forty, had told her about.

But notwithstanding the thrill of the new excitement and the softly modulated voice of her escort, there were moments when Miss Sophronia was troubled, one reason for which being the pretty blue-eyed girl who presided at the Seaside piano. The other was the somewhat angular but sturdy form of Ezra Bascom, that had a peculiar way of appearing in her dreams of late.

For twelve years Ezra's brilliantly polished No. 9's had crossed the Higgin threshold on Sunday evening, and every pleasant Wednesday evening they had driven behind Ezra's handsome roan; but never a word of love had passed between them.

But what troubled Miss Sophronia was that she had promised to write, and after a week of Seaside distractions had forgotten.

July brought its usual flock of vacationists and the man of the orange tie was greatly in demand. Miss Sophronia noted this and considered his unselfishness one of his most admirable qualities. Still there were hours that he stole away to entertain her and escort her wherever she willed to go, while all the time the blue-eyed pianist cast tender glances at him, while her cheeks grew pale under the demands of the Seaside guests.

The season was to close the second week in September, and the last of August, her conscience having been more heavy than usual of late, Miss Sophronia sent a picture postcard to Ezra, and in return mail a flaringly attractive one came in return. In the center sat a youthful swain on a rustic seat, one arm about a ghostly vision of a sweet young thing, and underneath, "This is a lonesome town without you," while the one word "Ezra" was written in the corner.

"Poor Ezra," she sighed. "Oh! this isn't right, and she loves him, I know." "This," meaning her affair with the man of the orange tie.

That Mr. Harding Graves had been very attentive all summer could not be denied. "Half a beau," she had called him at first; then later she had concluded that he was an "almost beau." But of late the pleasure had been marred by the thoughts of the little blue-eyed girl, who wasn't fifteen years older than he. Miss Sophronia felt sure that she cared for him, and even if he was pleasant with the others she decided that she would not be the cause of a broken heart at least, and then "it's not being true to Ezra," she concluded as she rang for the bellboy and dispatched a formal note to the man of the orange tie, pleading a headache that made their sail to the point impossible and thanking him very demurely for a very happy summer.

Two weeks later, back in her little parlor, Miss Sophronia was planning for the new house, and as she planned her fingers were busy on a long white silken seam. Only one thing troubled her. She wondered if she had really had a flirtation that summer. To her mind it was a grievous sin, and how could she ever explain it to Ezra? Just then the Bittle Hunter girl came from the post office with a letter. It was from Mr. Westley, telling her when he would be there to settle the season's business; also to learn the terms for the sale of the hotel. Inclosed was the account of the employees of the summer and their wages, and heading it "J. Harding Graves, Entertainer; Mrs. J. Harding Graves, Pianist—"

Miss Sophronia read no more. A load was lifted from her mind; she hadn't hurt anyone's feelings after all.

Then she saw a postscript to Westley's letter: "Those Graves people sort of soaked you on the expenses. He knew to whom your uncle left the property, all right."

But Sophronia Higgin did not care about having been "soaked" as she commenced sewing on the long seam of her wedding dress.

Boon for Lovers of Limburger

(By United Press)

Washington, Oct. 6.—President Wilson will await advices of Secretary of Labor Wilson before acting on the appeal of the anthracite coal miners for a readjustment of their present wage scale, according to White House officials today.

Secretary of Labor met with the policy committee of the miners in Chicago, Ohio and is expected to give the President a full report of the proceedings with recommendations for action.

The president previously refused to approve the wage award made by the anthracite coal commission while many of the miners were on an unauthorized strike.

ONE PEACE OASIS IN NEAR EAST

(By United Press)

London, (By Mail.)—Despite all reports to the contrary, there is one spot in Europe where peace and prosperity reigns. And, incongruous as it may seem, this one spot is in Russia.

Down in the newly created Republic of Georgia, the scars of war are invisible. In this little principality, bounded by the Black and Caspian Seas on the west and east respectively, Armenia on the South and the Caucasus on the north, a quiet and completely normal life exists, according to the Georgian Foreign Minister, who has arrived in London to confer with Premier Lloyd George and Earl Curzon, head of the Foreign office.

The Georgian diplomat attributed the enviable state of affairs in his country to the temperament of the Georgians, their geographical location and the political self control of the government.

"We have been absolutely free from the horrors of civil war which has torn asunder the former Russian Empire," said M. Gurgushvili, "in Georgia—The oasis of peace in the Near East—the revolution did not disturb the status as it did in most of Russia. On the contrary it created a state on a purely democratic basis. This is the best proof of the political maturity of the Georgian people.

"Now firmly established, with their own government, it is the wish of the Georgians to imbue the civilization of the old countries of Europe. We want foreign capital knowledge and experience to come to our country in a friendly way in order to utilize its wealth to our mutual advantage."

The greatest standing block in the way of economic intercourse with other nations, according to the foreign minister, is the hesitancy of European nations in recognizing the complete independence of the newly created republic.

Several of the entente nations have recognized the de facto government, but are withholding de jure recognition because of the stand taken by the United States in regard to Russia.

America's "watchful waiting" policy together with her refusal to approve the upbreaking of the old empire and the establishment of independent states out of the various provinces, it is pointed out, prevents American as well as foreign capital from seeking investments and developing the immense natural resources.

REPUBLICAN IN POLITICS

DIRTY MONEY

Many complaints are made by the public as to the dirty condition of paper money now supplied by the government. Badly soiled bills are not merely offensive, but they are a possible source for carrying diseases. Formerly many banks made a speciality of giving their customers clean money. They rarely failed to have a stock of clean new bills. A fellow felt rich with a wad of those crisp fellows in his pockets. But those days have long since passed.

The treasury department has some reasonable enough excuses. One great trouble is that bills wear out faster than they did. They are being printed on paper made from cotton, whereas they formerly came from linen paper made from flax imported from Ireland and Russia. Also the bureau of engraving and printing is busy on Liberty bonds And the circulation of paper money has been greatly increased.

There is a widespread demand for greater efficiency in the public service. It seems probable that the methods of government printing could be improved. Government work is cursed by red tape and failure to reward superior ability. The time will come when every department of the government will be overhauled and put on an efficiency basis. The man and the party who is big enough to do that, regardless of political pull, will make a hit. When that time comes, it seems reasonable to suppose that the government's printing can be done to better advantage, and then the public could expect cleaner currency.

But it may be a good while before such a modernization can be effected, and the public would like cleaner money now. If the treasury gradually reduces the inflation caused by the war, the department should be better able to supply the currency needs of the country.

BASE BALL HEROES

Baseball players have been idolized by the multitudes who love the game, and many people find it hard to realize that any of them prove unworthy. The good ball player is adored by a circle of worshippers. To the small boy he is a demigod, and is watched with awe and reverence as he swings along the pavement.

A commonplace appearing fellow in ordinary clothes becomes a great public character when wearing the uniform. The leading men of the community are proud of his friendship.

These players get more flattery than is good for them. Many of them become stuck on their abilities, and let up on training and soon disappear from the professional diamond. The fellow who makes a successful professional over a period of years, needs a lot of common sense, and usually has it.

Many people have felt, whatever corruption might exist in American life, that baseball was one thing that was kept honest. The scandal now agitating baseball circles has made some people feel they have cherished illusions. Evidently the gambling fraternity, who usually consider that every man has his price, have felt that a sufficient consideration would tempt a good many of these fellows to show the yellow streak. But it is easy to exaggerate such manifestations. One crooked player could throw dirt on a hundred that are straight.

Unless suspicion of crookedness is removed, attendance on professional ball games will witness a slump. The public will not pay its money to see contests that are set up in advance. The managements understand this perfectly, and have given evidence of determination to clean out the purchasable element.

BUILDING FOREIGN TRADE

The exports of the United States in 1913 were about $2,465,000,000. In 1918 they were about $5,628,000,000. The world has had to buy American goods on account of the war. No wonder the factories had more than they could do.

New European industries are reviving, planning to get their old trade back again. What will become of the American industries that have been depending on suddenly increased foreign business?

Many commercial authorities say the only remedy is to send young men abroad who shall settle down in foreign countries and introduce United States products. They need know the language perfectly, to be well acquainted with foreign customs and needs, and to know the business men personally. That would make a fine career for many young fellows now in school and at college.

Another thing Cox doesn't like about Harding is that he did not have a clear majority of the primary votes. What was Cox's primary score?

Cotton is quoted in New York a few cents higher per pound than wool---which may be the reason you get so much cotton in your all-wool suit.

Women are warned not to write any postscripts on the ballots on election day under the penalty of having their votes thrown out.

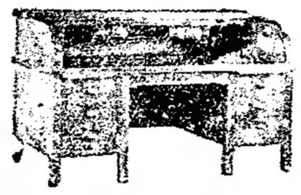
The plan of creation included a wise feature when it was made impossible for men to fool with the weather.

Cleaning Watches With Bread.

Perhaps the most novel use to which bread is put may be seen in some of the great watch factories, where more than forty loaves of fresh bread are sometimes used each day.

From earliest times in the history of watchmaking it has been the custom to reduce fresh bread to the form of dough. This dough is used for removing oil and chips that naturally adhere in course of manufacture to pieces as small as the parts of a watch. There are many parts of a watch that are so small as to be barely visible to the naked eye. The oil is absorbed by this dough, and the chips stick to it, and there is no other known substance which can be used as a wiper without leaving some of its particles attached to the thing wiped.



HOW TO SELECT A DESK

The Top should have a hard, smooth working surface, of quartered oak or mahogany, as pencils cut into soft wood or into the pores of plain oak.

The Wearing Parts, such as drawers and arm rests, must be of hard wood able to stand stress and strain. They must not stick, but must be tight enough to be dust proof. Pores of the wood must be filled and finished to prevent swelling by the absorption of moisture. Drawer bottoms must be "cross laid."

The Legs should be of straight grained material, with brass ferrules to prevent splitting and with domes of silence to permit easy moving.

Durability ... "Your desk should last as long as you do." The ... should be such as to guarantee endurance. Look ... "put up" ... purchase "as you like it."

The Finish must be ... and durable, ... stains, ... and ...

WOULD HAVE WOMEN PROPOSE

Writer Assails Old Idea That She Must Wait Until She Is Sought in Marriage.

More and more it becomes evident that a great and solemn referendum is needed to settle the question: Shall women propose? This matter—it is a leap year—has been agitating men and women for more than six months. When 1920 opened, this newspaper called attention to the fact that it was a leap year and suggested and even advised women to tackle men who were hanging back and see that they did their duty and assumed the burden of marriage. We told women to boldly propose to men and see that they gave the right answer—an affirmative. There is no person quite so much of a slacker as a sniggling bachelor, and if he possesses not the nerve to ask a woman to marry him, then it is the right of the woman to demand that he marry her and see that he does. Weak arguments have been offered against women proposing; folk say it is unwomanly, that it belittles the girl, and a lot of nonsense like that. If persons will look at the matter reasonably and realize that it is the duty of every healthy person to have a mate through life, they will understand that it is as much a woman's right to request a man to marry her as it is the man's right to put the question to her. Whenever we repeat what we have said before on this matter, shouts do the press ring from ... who men slow in ... to ... bold or are bashful. It ... to ... dum we feel sure the ... to propose will be ... —Chicago Evening Post.

Oh-h-h Skin-nay!

Come Over! Hagan's Ice Cream!

That all-boy appetite, with its most all-day craving, and Hagan's Ice Cream, an all-day food-dessert, are twins. They're the best in their respective lines.

At lunch, after-school, after-the-game, after-play, Hagan's Ice Cream takes the kink out of the inner craving of the all-day. Rich, pasteurized cream, with its pure flavorings carefully and accurately measured and frozen, is nourishing, body-building, strengthening. There's more food value in a quart of Hagan's Ice Cream than in a pound of the best steak.

Let him have all he wants. It's good for him. But like yourself, be sure the boy insists on Hagan's Ice Cream.

Believe me, there are no adulterations about that growing young American. He's all boy. And there are no adulterations in Hagan's Ice Cream. It's all ice cream.

Brooklyn Wins

paw duel between Sergeant Sherrod Smith and "Duster" Mails, the new left handed phenom of the Indians.

The day broke clear with a promising sun out of the cloudless sky. The weather prediction was more encouraging with a promise of rising temperature and decreasing winds.

The story of the first two games can be told in one breath---Coveleskie and Grimes.

Just as the Pole spitballer baffled the Robins in the first game, the moist deliveries of Burleigh Grimes made the Cleveland bats useless at the plate.

Cleveland didn't have a chance until the eighth inning when Grimes proved he was a pitcher if he hadn't before.

His spiter took a notion not to break at the start of the inning and he walked three men. But he got Speaker, Smith and Johnston, a trio of terrors in a pinch.

The Robins played perfect ball in the field and backed up their star right hander sensationally at times.

Tommy Griffith, distinguished himself at the bat with two hits that drove in two runs. Grimes, who bats almost as good as he pitches, led off with a single in the third inning and scored the second run on Griffith's double.

Although the count in games stands even, Brooklyn seems to be better fortified for the remaining games than the Indians.

When Bagby failed to deliver yesterday he broke a hope of Speaker's that his trio---Coveleskie, Bagby and Mails could do it all.

Bagby was ineffective yesterday and there were no breaks against him. He showed the effects of the hard work in the pennant race and gave no promise that he will be in better form for his next start.

Speaker has used his two greatest pitchers and has one game. Mails of course, on the form he showed in sweeping down the circuit in the American league looks worth a million or two dollars but he will be an experiment in the "big show."

Uncle Robby, on the other hand, had used but one of his real aces and he has landed a game, waiting for their turn, he has the two southpaws, Smith, and Mitchell, big Jeff Pfeffer, Al Mamaux, who looked fine in the opening game, and Cadore.

Coveleskie looks good for a game every time he starts and so does Grimes. If the Robins should happen to break through Mails, it looks like a lost chance for another hunting in Ohio.

Today's game finishes the first series here. Both teams with a regiment of scribes leave tonight on a special train over the Pennsylvania for Cleveland, where the series opens Saturday for a brace of four games.

If the championship is not decided there the teams will return here and play the necessary game.

Coveleskie, it is thought is sure to start the first game in Cleveland but the Brooklyn selection is doubtful.

Harding Speaks

By RAYMOND CLAPPER

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 7—Rejection, not interpretation, should be the fate of obligations imposed by the League of Nations covenant, Senator Warren G. Harding declared in a speech here today.

"I am not to turn my back on them," he said, "it is not interpretation, but rejection that I am seeking."

Harding met Democratic queries as to his views about "scrapping" the league with the retort that it is futile to talk about "scrapping" something already "scrapped."

Declaring he does not want to visit the final solution of the problem by being too specific now, Harding proposed that as soon as possible after the election he will call the best men of the country, including members of senate, into conference to formulate the international program.

His speech here today is the first of the set addresses scheduled on his trip. Although speaking in a Republican stronghold, Harding had been informed that a hard fight is being made against the re-election of Senator Cummins, co-author of the Cummins-Esch railroad act, and he, therefore, included a warm endorsement of Cummins in his speech.

Instruct Children

This campaign for the prevention of fire is being carried out in every section of the state. The schools have taken up the work of educating the children to the great importance of caution to prevent fire, cities, towns and boroughs are likewise putting forth an effort to cooperate with the state by removing old dilapidated buildings, stables and debris of every kind. Along with this general state wide campaign Monessen is to the front.

Prof H. E Gress has provided 4300 questionnaires, one for every school pupil, and they are being distributed throughout the school room and every school building in the town. They will go into the homes and will be read by every member of the family and this will go a long way in protecting the town from the hazard of fire.

Considering the high cost of building material and labor many people have not provided ample insurance in case their property should be destroyed. Some have not changed their schedule of value since the war and this item of protection should be looked into very carefully by home owners and property owners. Real estate and insurance men throughout the state are joining in the general movement for a wide publicity and a general protection of property against fire loss.

Movement to Americanize Foreigners

A big movement to Americanize foreigners and educate illiterates throughout the state has been started in Pittsburgh. The Chamber of Commerce of that city will direct the movement in co-operation with the state department. At a big meeting held last night which was attended by educators, mill heads and business people plans were made to extend the work to every city in the big industrial district.

Monessen has been handling this work mostly through the schools and the plans outlined in Pittsburgh will likely be extended here and will be taken up by the board of trade and women's organizations at a later date.

Plans provide for obtaining the active support and interest of officials of the various plants in the entire Pittsburgh district from the heads down to and including foremen of departments, and the instruction of these persons in methods best calculated to interest the foreigner and have him enter into the spirit of the movement. The first step will be to train workers and then will follow the state-wide campaign, fostered by state authorities to instruct every foreigner in the English language, this phase of the movement to be called the "English First" campaign.

The work contemplates a movement of a wider scope than ever before attempted and will include, in addition to the industrial and business concerns and the public schools, active aid from civic, fraternal, religious, patriotic and other organizations, together with an educational campaign through the newspapers. The work has been systematically outlined and will be persecuted vigilantly.

DESERVES PLACE IN HISTORY

Cecrops, Illustrious Egyptian, Made Country an Asylum for the Innocent and Persecuted.

With the dawn of Attic civilization in ancient Greece, Cecrops, an Egyptian, built a town on the site where later the citadel of Athens rose in magnificence. He introduced morals and judicial regulations, and the country under his rule became an asylum for the innocent and persecuted. From that time on festivals, compacts and laws extended their beneficial influence. About 120 years after him the Phoenician Cadmus brought the use of letters into Boeotia; and at Thebes in the same country, he erected a citadel. The greatest lyric poet and the greatest general of the Greeks were Boeotians, but nevertheless this people was accused of stupidity. While their value was not appreciated, their discoveries were brought to perfection by others and more usefully applied.

It is remarkable that Cadmus, the father of learning who taught us to hand down our thoughts to futurity, came into Greece just at a time when Joshua, the leader of the Jews, drove the Phoenician tribes toward the sea and compelled them to seek refuge in distant colonies. This act of a despised people, scarcely known to Greek historians, was the occasional cause of all the intellectual and moral excellence which has arisen through the influence of literature.

ON THE WINGS OF THE WIND

Nothing So Small That the Zephyrs Shall Not Find It and Spread It Beneficially.

Acres of perfume come on the wind from the black and white of the beanfield; the fire fir, the air by the copse with perfume. I know nothing to which the wind has not some happy use. Is there a grain of dust so small the wind shall not find it out? Ground in the mill-wheel of the centuries, the iron of the distant mountain floats like gossamer, and is drunk up as dew. * * * A thousand miles of cloud go by from morn till night, passing overhead without a sound; the immense packs, a mile square, succeed to each other, side by side, and parallel, hook slope coming up from the horizon and widening as they approach. From morn till night the silent footfalls of the ponderous vapors travel overhead no sound, no creaking of the wheels and rattling of the chains; it is calm at the earth, but the wind labors without an effort above, with such ease, with such power. Gray smoke hangs on the hillside where the couch-heaps are piled, a cumulus of smoke; the wind comes, and it draws its length along like the genii from the earthen pot; there leaps up a red flame shaking its head, it shines in the bright sunlight; you can see it across the valley.—Richard Jefferies.

Magnet Has Many Uses.

A highly important use of a magnet is that in which it is sometimes employed to withdraw small pieces of iron from such out of the way places as the human eye. Another use of the attractive force of magnetism on a much larger scale was that to which it was put by Edison in his magnetic ore separator, in which the ore, previously crushed to a fine powder, is dropped down a chute past the poles of powerful electro-magnets, in passing which the iron particles of the ore are deflected to one side, while the non-magnetic stone dust continues undeflected down the chute. Still another instance of the employment of magnetism in a small way is that in which a magnetic tack hammer is used in the manufacture of strawberry baskets on a large scale in conjunction with a mechanical device which presents the tacks, one at a time and head up, to the operative, thereby greatly facilitating his work.

A Psychologist's Morning After.

I had two days spoiled by a psychological experiment with mescal, an intoxicant used by some of our southwest Indians in their religious ceremonies—a sort of cactus bud of which the United States government had distributed a supply to certain medical men, including Weir Mitchell, who sent me some to try. He had himself been "to Maryland." It gives the most glorious visions of color—every object the glance appears in a jeweled splendor unlike anything in the natural world. It disturbs the stomach somewhat, but that, according to W. M., was a cheap price. I was violently sick for twenty-four hours, had no other symptom whatever except that and the kaleidoscopic following day.—From Letters of William James, Atlantic Monthly.

CHANGE OF HEART

By NELL ADAIR

(©, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

At Home, July 12th.

Dear Richard:

The letter which I am about to write may be a shock to you perhaps, but you will at least not experience the pain which is mine in the writing. For my affection for you has been undivided, while yours—well, what does the old verse say?

"The moon shines on many brooks,
The brook sees but one moon."

And it is because of your propensity for shining "on many brooks" that I am returning, under separate cover, the ring you gave me when we became engaged. I would not have believed that so short a separation could utterly change your feelings. But Tilda has informed me in a merry and exhaustive epistle of what she terms your "carrying on." Tilda, it seems, does not consider seriously, as I do, the allegiance of love. To her a passing flirtation is but passing allowable amusement, to me flirtation upon your part is an indescribably bitter discovery of faithlessness. Have I not been content to remain at home or in the companionship of young women friends during your absence? Why, then, should it be necessary for you to find your happiness by accompanying various girls on pleasure expeditions? Even this might have been forgivable—and perhaps forgetable—had not Tilda emphasized the fact of your attention to one certain young woman. Her friend, and a friend also of Tilda's brother with whom you told me you expected to start upon a fishing trip, is the young woman in whose company Tilda says you may always be found, and upon whose account she declares that same fishing trip is postponed from day to day. Your own letters bear no reference to the name of Josephine Towers ("Jo," Tilda says that you and her brother companionably call the girl.) As you have portrayed every other member of the household for my interested reading why omit the popular Jo? My last brief line of inquiry concerning this person received no reply. Neither has my plea as to the truth of Tilda's statements. Silence is supposed "to give consent," is it not? Therefore after hours of heart burning and I confess, just anger, I return your ring. Jealous suffering is unbearable and I will have no more of it. Without love there will be no jealousy so I have torn love for one so unworthy from my heart. And, Dick Webster, you needn't write a yarn of abject apology or any string of plausible excuses for I simply won't be bothered any more. The fact remains that while you left me to loneliness you were running about with other girls, ending finally in open devotion to a newfound acquaintance. And if the information was there during the newness of our betrothal it will always be there even through married life. So this means good-bye. Inevitably and irrevokably good-bye. Nothing that you might ever do or say could persuade me to reconsider the matter or change the finality of my decision. That is absolute. Even love has its limitation.

FRANCES JANE FOWLER.
Lynden General Hospital.
July 14th.

My dear Miss Fowler:

The enclosed letter, which I am returning to you with a small box which came with it, is the one which was directed by yourself to a certain Mr. Richard Webster, who is, at present, a patient in our hospital. I am his nurse and the letter was forwarded here in my care.

You may or may not have learned, that Mr. Webster was rushed to the hospital a few days ago, suffering from acute appendicitis which required a prompt operation. The operation proved successful, but the patient, who has been very brave through it all, is still in a critical condition. None of the friends with whom he was visiting at this time has been permitted even to see him. So you may realize that a communication as disturbing as yours would be an unwise one to read to him now, despite his continual request for a letter. It was to alleviate anxiety that I (inadvertently) opened yours in his presence this morning, and after a hasty realization of its import, I was obliged to substitute under your name merely a message of sympathy in my own words. Under a sailing promise that he should have the next letter in his own hands, I was able to slip away to you. He says, Permit me to add that whatever doubts you may have had as to young Richard Webster's affection for yourself that affection is still there and most evident.

Truly yours,
MARTHA WESTRY,
Nurse, Lynden Hospital.
Lynden, July 16th.

Dearest, darling Dicky:

Are you surprised to learn that I am in Lynden? I traveled all night to get to you, for it was only yesterday that I learned of your illness. This is a little "be prepared and ready to see me" note for I am hurrying—and oh! how much faster my heart is hurrying—on to you.

Love is a wonderful thing, isn't it Dicky?

There is just no limit to it at all.

Ever your own
FRAN.

HERBERT

By MILORED WHITE.

(©, 1911, Western Newspaper Union.)

Jack Laidlaw brought his car to a stop in the driveway and sat frowning across the lawn to where his pretty young wife was entertaining Herbert Moore beside a table set for tea. This afternoon tea—musical sort of thing—was becoming altogether too frequent to suit Jack's taste. Herbert in a white suit with his mandolin upon his knee presented a picture of pleasurable idleness which irritated the young husband beyond measure. What had got into Janet?

"Tea dear?" she asked sweetly.

"No?" Janet said, "then what brings you out to our tea table?"

This was too much for even a patient husband. Jack glared into his wife's unmoved face and sank—sullenly down on the grass.

"Sing 'Forgotten,' Herbert," she requested.

The fellow had a melting baritone, Jack secretly admitted, but the nerve of him trying it out to flirt with Janet. And Janet listening with that starry look on her lovely face—Jack arose.

"Got an errand down town Janey," he said, "come along and ride with me." His wife flushed in embarrassment.

"Jack forgets his manners sometimes," she apologized to her guest. "It's merely thoughtlessness upon his part, Mr. Moore," she told her husband severely, "came to spend the afternoon, your errand can wait." Miss Peggy Wales entering the garden at this moment saved the situation.

"May I have some tea, Mrs. Laidlaw?" she entreated. "Of course I didn't really care about the tea, but I do want to hear Mr. Moore's music."

Jack drew a long breath. Peggy was in the field now, she had sighted this Moore Adonis, and started out to battle. When Peggy set herself to win a victory, her lexicon knew no such word as fail. Herbert would capitulate and freed from his flatterer, Janet would forget its pleasantness and be her old sweet comfortable self — so thought Jack. But his wife arising hastily at Peggy's unwelcome approach, had donned her sweater.

"So sorry," she murmured coldly, "Mr. Laidlaw, Mr. Moore and I were just leaving for a drive."

Jack gasped his wife had never before been guilty of flagrant discourtesy. But Miss Peggy Wales showed no resentment, neither did she retreat.

"Couldn't you," she asked Janet wistfully, "leave Mr. Moore here with me?"

Peggy's stare was amused, and open to challenge. Jack turned away disgusted. His wife, his idealized wife jealous—of another man.

"If you are so anxious to stay," she said evenly, "I will remain to play hostess."

"Thanks," Peggy cheerfully agreed. With a good natured shrug to any arrangement, the favored Herbert bent over his mandolin.

"Sing that song again — please?" whispered Peggy.

Janet quickly leaned forward.

"Not—Forgotten"—Herbert."

There was reproach in her tone, at the suggestion. A dull red spread to the young man's hair.

"Don't you like his voice in that song?" questioned the too innocent Peggy.

"Then I will sing it myself tune up, Mr. Moore. I'll put lots of thrills in the sentiment."

Jack stretched himself again on the grass. He was beginning to enjoy things in a bitter revengeful way.

"Come," she invited peremptorily, "walk with me across the park, Mr. Moore. I've some hours."

"Good afternoon, Mrs. Laidlaw," he murmured—"lovely time."

"The little cat," said Janet.

"I do not think," her husband answered icily, "that I understand you."

"Of course you don't." Janet wailed. "And I promised Helen not to one should know of our little conspiracy. Now, I suppose I shall have to tell you. Helen was almost engaged to Herbert when she went to be with Peggy in Boston. Helen wrote about him, and he seemed quite devoted to her. The only thing Helen was afraid of was that Peggy Wales would fall in with Herbert's ideas she was away. And then we'll see how it turns out. So I promised Helen [illegible] I would keep Herbert entertained."

"Mrs. Laidlaw," interrupted a distant voice—"I put Herbert on a park bench and hurried back to tell you that we are engaged. It happened—they asked me to tell you. Herbert [illegible] me.
